FLOWERS.

Written for THE COURIER.

The dear little flowers that peep up so bright
Lifting their heads in the morning sunlight
Are the fairest of gems that are strewn in our way.

To gladden our hearts through the long summer day.

And when in the evening our tasks are all done,
And we rest from our labors at set of sun,
The dear little flowers with their perfumes rare,
Are scattered broadcast on the evening air.

And then in the morning the first thing we know,
Our window is filled with the scarlet glow
Of honeysuckle, cypress and aglantine,
The sweetest blossoms that ever were seen.

Sparkling as bright in their beauty there,
With the dewdrops glistening everywhere,
There is nothing fairer on earth I know
Than the beautiful flowers that come and go.

And nothing fairer in heaven we'll find
Than beautiful flowers of every kind,
Unless per chance a beautiful soul
By the blessing of God has been made whole.

If I should chance to reach that heaven
Where they say a crown to the good is given,
May my crown be of the lovely flowers,
That have cheered me through life's lonely hours.

JESSIE.

Death of Little Ethel Allyn.

Ethel, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allyn, died at Haywood, Iowa, Friday night, aged eighteen months. The remains were brought to Lincoln Tuesday for interment, and the body now lies in a vault at Wyuka cemetery. A lady friend of the family wrote the following in memory of the departed little darling:

Some one has said, "earth has no sorrows that heaven cannot heal." This may be true and we hope it is, for we feel sometimes that there is no power on earth that can heal our sorrows. More especially do we feel this when called upon to look for the last time on the face of a loved one who has been near and dear to us, and still more especially do we feel it when that loved one is our own precious darling, a little child. There is no sorrow so deep, no grief so hard to bear as that of the parents who are called upon to part with their dearest earthly treasure.

And we ask ourselves why should we be so stricken? Why should a child die? Why should a child not live to womanhood or manhood and be a comfort and a blessing to its parents? Why nip the fairest buds of earth's only paradise?

These questions are asked daily as grief-stricken parents follow their loved darling to the grave. But they are never answered and humanity will still continue to bear the burden that seems almost unbearable at times.

To the father and mother who have been thus afflicted life can never be the same again. There will always be an aching void, an empty place in the heart that nothing on earth can fill. In giving up our father, mother, brother or sister we will grieve sorely. But time, the great healer of all human woes, will eventually lighten this grief. But not so with the loss of a child. There will always be a something that can never be described or explained, but only felt by those who have lost a child. In time you will take your place again in society and move about among your friends and perform your accustomed duties as of yore. But ever and anon that little face will rise before you, you will feel the pressure of baby fingers as they tangle over your face, and the bright smile that lit up the face of your darling will be vividly before you. And you will bow your head and tears will fall and the sorrow will all be lived over and over again. But as God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb may he also temper the grief of his children that they will smile through their tears as they look beyond the clouds of the present to the silver lining of the future. For has He not said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." What a beautiful thought that is to the lonely mothers who have seen their little ones pass from an earthly home to a more beautiful one in heaven, and to realize

That God needed one more angel child
Amidst His shining band,
And so He best with loving smile
And clasped our darling's hand.

And to know that the dear little hands are leading us, and the bright eyes of our darling are looking for us, and the sweet lips waiting with smiles and kisses to greet us where sad partings come no more.

At The Conservatory.

The management of the Conservatory of Music are making preparations for a heavy year's work next year. Letters are being received every day from former students, who write that they will bring two or three with them in September. The new building will greatly add to the facilities of the work, while the faculty will be still further strengthened and enlarged. Director Howell has been corresponding for several months with leading schools and educators of the world in the endeavor to secure a gentleman teacher for the voice department who should meet the highest requirements and who should place that department on a par with the first schools in the land. The engagement of Mr. Clemens Movious, of Berlin, Germany, has been the result of his research and he is highly recommended by the director of the Conservatorium of Berlin, in which he is engaged as assistant teacher. Mr. Movious is a teacher of broad and comprehensive method, and a singer of eminent ability. He will sail for America the 20th of August.
